Signs larger than 16 square feet and constructed with rigid materials such as plywood are considered freestanding signs. A permit can be obtained for these signs if they are securely fastened below grade. A portable sign (one per lot maximum) is allowed with a permit on a business or industrial zoned lot. However, the permits for these signs are only granted for up to one month. Up to two banner signs (40 square foot maximum per sign) without a permit can also be erected on a business or industrial zoned lot. These signs are typically constructed of lightweight fabric.
